Videotapes

America's War Against Drugs (28 minutes): Keeping drugs out of the United States and off our streets is the subject of this made-for-TV documentary. After briefly tracing drug abuse from ancient Greece through its emergence in the United States in the mid-1800s, the tape focuses on how the Federal government is working to stop drug smugglers at our borders, and how the United States is helping other countries to combat the problem through eradication of illegal crops and by disrupting drug traffickers.

Traveling Abroad More Safely (12 minutes): Avoiding the hazards of overseas travel is the subject of this videotape. The tape explains how a traveler can judge the relative safety of a country and provides some time-tested techniques for avoiding hazardous situations, including suggested safety measures to use in a terrorist incident.

Films

The History of U.S. Foreign Relations (a four-part series of 30-minute films; production completed 1976): Using actual locations, paintings, political cartoons, and documentary footage, this series of color films recreates the history of U.S. foreign relations from the American Revolution to mid-1975. "An Age of Revolutions" documents American diplomacy from the American Revolution through the Monroe Doctrine. "Youth to Maturity" traces the expansion of American interests and the evolution of the United States into a major world power prior to the events of World War I. "The Reluctant World Power" illustrates the increasing involvement of the United States in world affairs and describes the events that led to the Second World War. "The Road to Interdependence" outlines the development of U.S. foreign policy from the end of World War II to the nation's bicentennial.

From Where I Sit. This program explores how conflicting interests and opinions affect foreign policy issues and shape our national objectives. Using the issues of trade, energy, and arms control, the film provides a basis for a discussion on how policymakers reach foreign policy decisions.

The Work of Peace (28 minutes; produced by the Smithsonian Institution): The Treaty of Paris ended the Revolutionary War and established American independence. This program describes the peace talks that culminated in the signing of the treaty in 1783. Filmed on location in England and France, the documentary shows how American diplomats Benjamin Franklin, John Jay, and John Adams won a remarkable triumph in their peace negotiations with the formidable rulers of France, Great Britain, and Spain. Dramatic recreations of events bring crucial moments in the talks to life. Excerpts from the original writings of the diplomats are featured. Through the film, viewers trace the making of a treaty that has been called "the most favorable in the history of American diplomacy." The program is accompanied by a comprehensive study guide containing historical background on the treaty, strategies for teaching the topic of diplomacy, and suggestions for classroom activities. Other available resource materials include portraits, a historical map, a Treaty of Paris poster, and a transcript of the treaty itself.

Atlas Series

The Atlas of the Soviet Union, September 1987, contains basic information about the Soviet role in world affairs. It consists of 20 maps, tables, and charts with brief texts illustrating Soviet foreign affairs machinery, trade, and political relations, military stance, and other subjects, including a chronology of major events in U.S.-Soviet relations. ($1.50, GPO S/N 044-000-02219-2, 21 pp.)

Atlas of United States Foreign Relations, December 1985, provides basic information about U.S. foreign relations for easy reference and as an educational tool. Comprising 100 pages with 90 maps and charts, it is divided into six sections dealing with: U.S. national security, trade and investment, international organizations, elements of the world economy, development assistance, and foreign relations machinery. This is the second edition of the atlas (first published in 1983). For this second edition, most of the displays have been revised or updated, and some have been expanded or recast to reflect recent developments. ($5.00, GPO S/N 044-000-02102-1, 100 pp.)

The Atlas of NATO, February 1985, contains basic information about the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO). In 19 displays, it illustrates NATO's membership and structure, military strength, members' role in world affairs, and relations with the Soviet Union and the Warsaw Pact. ($1.75, GPO S/N 044-000-02039-4, 24 pp.)
